

Elm Creek XC Series Race Report: Week 2, December 12, 2018

The holidays have brought home some college competition for the regulars in the Elm Creek XC Series. Perfect conditions met racers at the start, with 27 degrees and almost no wind. In the freestyle race, a tight pack held together for loop one, only to have Andy Schakel break away in the second loop for the men's overall win, followed closely by Clayton Keim and Anders Olson. Lisa Garretson took the women's win, not far behind, with Emily Muellner in second and Julie Garretson in third. The classic race had a smaller field, and Lisa took a "double header" as the women's winner for classic, too. Emily Meullner was also a "two-taker" as the women's 2nd place classic skier, and Emily Broderson gilded in for third. Artie Huber streaked away from the men's field, double poling to victory (first ever classic win!), despite a bum peroneal tendon, proving that being able to only double pole on doctor's orders can pay off. Will Carlen took 2nd for the men, with Any Schakel on the podium once more, in 3rd place. If racers see any inaccuracies, please contact us via our Facebook page or website (elmcreekxc.org), as there was a bit of a cluster at the finish line, so finishing order may be slightly off for the freestyle race.
