Many clients have been asking about "vegan wine" lately. Some wines are fined with egg white, bentonite (clay), or other natural material. This is a normal part of the winemaking process and there may be trace amounts remaining in the wine. These particles are extremely small and virtually undetectable, if there is any remaining at all in the finished wine. As we collect information from our producers, we will update the list and mark those that don't fine or that only use bentonite to fine as "vegan".

Most important to us are organic and biodynamic producers. Most of the wines we bring in are from small family estates, where the owners live on property. Some will refuse to pay for organic certification due to the expense and bureaucracy involved. You can be sure that a minimum amount of chemicals are used in the production of the wines that we import. We will update the list with "biodynamic" and "organic" certifications over the coming months.
