

Connoisseur of Fine Living

A sanctuary of inspiration.

By Nakayla Shakespeare

Photography by Paul Moore

The Collector's House is a gallery of intrigue where interior designers and individuals seek special pieces for their interior projects. With an appreciation of classical design intertwined with a nod to contemporary living, The Collector's House Curator & Founder, Jamilyn Fournier, hand-selects each piece intentionally for a modern point of view on old-world sophistication.

Contemporary clean lines blended with heritage, hand-crafted accessories, classical art and antiques are artistically curated in one place to inspire designers or those who simply love design. This boutique gallery combines the finest mix of pieces from around the world that promote elevated living and will uplift your creative spirit.

Fournier shared her passion for her business, "The Collector's House is where my heart sings, where I can use God's gifts in creating a gathering place for the community, where you can dream and envision interiors defined by quality craftsmanship with meticulous attention to detail, a place where the design community can collaborate and engage in the now and the future."

Embracing the beauty of living well, The Collector's House brand is focused on the quality of life through high-end and original pieces, continually adding a layer of beauty and refinement to the community. "We seek a level of artistry that is not easily found, introducing a world of wonder to our customers," Fournier states.

With an ever-evolving showroom, her authentic and experienced approach to interiors leads her to embrace preserving heritage and mastering the merger between the past and the present.

With a background in interior design and fashion, Fournier took a step away from her career in interior design to raise her family. Fournier returned to design with a new vision, establishing a retail + trade business in 2015, with her doors officially opening in 2016. The showroom has seen two renovations, expanding into a 6,000-square-foot interior space and adding a luxurious outdoor garden studio. Fournier continues to bring her vision to life by curating an intimate collection, representing the finest furniture artisans and working closely with collectors to find the right blend for her eclectic style and diverse appreciation for the arts.

“The Collector’s House is where my heart sings, where I can use God’s gifts in creating a gathering place for the community.”

As a collector herself, Fournier believes the philosophy of “change is growth.” With an ever-evolving showroom, her authentic and experienced approach to interiors leads her to embrace preserving heritage and mastering the merger between the past and the present. Her keen eye has allowed Fournier to create a harmonious and individual voice.

Fournier has found her calling in serving a community she is passionate about preserving. By believing in a collaborative foundation, Fournier works hard to support the design professionals who elevate the standard of living beautifully, building a refined and unified network of those who appreciate sophisticated design.

You are invited to visit The Collector’s House at the SHOPS at Gainey Village in Scottsdale, Arizona. ❶