

RJ Khalaf

RJ is the eldest son born into a family business who took it on a new path into repurposed art. It has been 100 years since his great grandfather came to America through Ellis Island.

RJ's love of automobiles and superheroes (his mom being the number one superhero) drew him to recycle discarded auto parts into whimsical variations of heroes, their foes and fantasy figures giving each one its own unique personality. Growing his work into a very prosperous art form, RJ now creates sculpture in his Las Vegas studio from just a few inches to over 10 feet. RJ continues to keep up the family tradition of quality and value while adding his creative touch to bring all his works alive and inspiring. At his core, RJ works every day to honor those who came before him and work to leave a better life for those who will live beyond us. RJ believes there is no substitute for hard work, excellent quality and a superb customer experience.
